February 28  Reducing Burnout and Regaining Clarity
Description: Does this sound familiar? You must prepare a class, finish writing a grant by an x due date, meet with your grad students, read through your colleague’s tenure file, sift through graduate student applications, respond to your father’s phone calls about your mothers ailing health, get the dry cleaning before they start charging you for storage, shop for food, revise the paper for Journal X, get to an overdue doctor’s appointment, and meet with your GRAs to talk about the grading of the next paper. You’re burnt out. Join Ruth Merle Doyle and Cindy Glanville for a discussion that will focus on developing tools and practices to help you make mindful choices about prioritizing your goals and tasks to help reduce your overload.
Panelists: Ruth Merle-Doyle, MS, ACSM RCEP and Health and Wellness Specialist with Cornell Wellness Program; Cindy Lee Glanville, LCSW, Health and Wellness Therapist with Cornell Wellness Program
225 ILR

Participants will learn the basic elements of advanced body-language skills and be guided through a series of experiences that will shed light on their current skills and teach them to ‘expand’ their non-verbal vocabulary.
Location: TBD
11:30 a.m. - 1:30 p.m.
CU-ADVANCE Special Events

February 13  “How to Develop and Maintain a Professional Online Presence” with Liz Lawley, Professor and Director, Lab for Social Computing, Rochester Institute of Technology

Workshop description: Online media are increasingly used by scholars to communicate about their research, collaborate, and teach. Join us for a workshop with Liz Lawley about how you develop and maintain an online professional persona. Topics covered will include how to best highlight current work (and the press coverage associated with it), how to effectively present and maintain important but older work, etc and how to navigate and pick from various online media available to you.

Elizabeth Lawley is the director of RIT’s Lab for Social Computing. Her current teaching and research interests focus on the development and use of social software and computing technologies, including weblogs, wikis, and real-time chat environments. She also conducts research and speaks on the topic of gender imbalances in technology and education. Liz has also been a visiting researcher at Microsoft Research in Redmond, WA, where she split her time between the MSR Community Technologies group, and MSN Search (where she was also a member of the "Search Champs" advisory board for two years).
